

As well as the historic mining industry, Cornwall is looked upon for its breathtaking scenery around the vastly spread coastlines. This detailed project documents a group of like minded individuals who thrive in their passion of sea swimming. This collective refer to themselves as “wild swimmers”. This accurate label portrays their love for embracing the Cornish coastline and the sites it presents with it. As individuals they offer a diverse range in personalities, however together they create a community that brave any climate to enjoy their passion. These images capture the relationships they have established within the group, as well as intimate portraits of many of the individuals that part take in this activity.